Houston, We Have a Problem

Where do business travelers not want to go? Houston is conference-goers first choice for virtual meetings rather than the in-person kind. Atlanta Hartsfield leads the list of least-favorite airports, according to an online survey of registrants for VUE2011, the virtual events user conference. Nearly half of respondents, 49%, said they would prefer a virtual meeting to attending an event in Houston. Los Angeles fared almost as badly, with 42% giving the thumbs down. Orlando got 38% no votes, followed by 33% negative for Miami; 28% said no thanks to Chicago. On the least-favorite airport side, Atlanta Hartsfield was followed by Washington Dulles and Los Angeles International.
